

The next big fat Bollywood wedding

Nupur with her parents Geeta and Rahul Sanon

Actor Nupur Sanon and singer Stebin Ben are all set to begin their wedding celebrations as the couple was spotted at the Mumbai airport, leaving for Udaipur on Wednesday. They were joined by Nupur's elder sister, actor Kriti Sanon, and her boyfriend Kabir Bahia. The couple is set to marry on January 11 at Raffles Udaipur, with festivities scheduled to begin on January 9. As per sources, a star-studded reception will also be hosted in a 5-star hotel in South Mumbai on January 13. Nupur and Stebin have kept their relationship largely away from the public eye. They announced their engagement on January 3.

Katy's PDA moment with Trudeau

American singer Katy Perry has stirred social media again after sharing cosy holiday photos with boyfriend and former Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau. In her "Holidayz" Instagram dump, the 41-year-old posted a candid snap where she leaned in to kiss a smiling Trudeau, 54, on the cheek. The post also included a shot of the former leader swimming in open water. This marks her most public display of affection since her breakup with long-time partner, actor Orlando Bloom, in mid-2025.

ChatGPT Health: OpenAI connects your medical and wellness data

OpenAI has launched ChatGPT Health, a dedicated and secure section within the chatbot that allows users to sync medical records and wellness apps (like Apple Health and MyFitnessPal) to receive personalised, data-driven insights. More than 230 million people globally ask health and wellness-related questions on ChatGPT every week, OpenAI said.

Designed as a "bridge" to professional care rather than a diagnostic tool, this feature uses "purpose-built" encryption and isolation to ensure health conversations are stored separately and are never used to train OpenAI's core AI models. Currently available via a waitlist for Free, Go, Plus, and Pro users, with medical record integration initially limited to the US - the feature is rolling out globally over the coming weeks to help the millions of users who already turn to ChatGPT for help, including lab reports, insurance, and fitness goals.

Manushi Chhillar in a tailored double-breasted suit

Manushi redefines sleek modern style

This look leans into modern power dressing without trying too hard. Manushi Chhillar wears a tailored double-breasted suit in Vitale Barberis Canonico by The Rajasab, keeping the mood crisp and confident. The ivory tone feels fresh and polished, while the shoulders and clean lines add polish. A soft pink regimental tie adds contrast and breaks the formality just enough, making the look feel current rather than boring corporate. Finished with classic black pointed toe heels and minimal accessories, it's the kind of outfit that commands attention without drama.

Steal the style

Start with a well-fitted neutral suit, ivory, beige, or soft grey works best. Add one unexpected element, like a pastel tie or scarf, to add a fun focal point. Keep shoes classic and accessories minimal so the tailoring stays front and centre.

Old-world charm, new-age homes

In a world where trends move faster than ever, our homes are becoming the one place where we finally stop rushing. Many homeowners are moving away from "disposable" furniture and fleeting styles, opting instead for a traditional look that feels solid and soulful. This shift isn't about creating a fancy or cluttered museum; it's about building a space that feels warm, comfortable, and designed to last a lifetime.

Traditional design is re-emerging as a grounded alternative to minimalism and the cottagecore trend. By prioritising character over novelty, this aesthetic uses earthy tones and refined details to create an environment that feels deeply personal. It's a move toward "considered" decor choosing pieces that have weight and history rather than following the latest internet craze.

"In all spaces, traditional decor is returning because it creates identity. In a market filled with generic glass-and-metal interiors, traditional materials, textures, and regional details help brands stand out and feel credible," says architect Anil Badan, Founder, Studio B Architects.

CURATION CUES

For your sleep sanctuary, anyone aiming for a traditional-style bedroom should focus on softness, balance and carefully considered details. Choosing timeless furniture and decor, such as upholstered headboards, coordinating nightstands, and layered bedding among other classic elements. "Materials like wood, stone, and handcrafted finishes offer durability, accessibility, and climate suitability. Today's renovations prioritise longevity over frequent replacement, making traditional principles highly relevant. This creates spaces that feel grounded and timeless, designed to age gracefully instead of chasing short-lived trends," says architect Bhuwan Kapila, WMA (Workshop for Metropolitan Architecture).

For the family room, layering different colours and textures is essential by incorporating rolled-arm sofas and skirted chairs as part of the furniture mix. The space must also additionally be grounded with a patterned rug and enhancing that cozy, well-lived-in feel with built-in shelving and warm wood finishes.

Similar design principles can be carried through to the kitchen and bathroom when embracing traditional decor again. Both these spaces will thrive with enduring builds, such as inset cabinetry, classic brass or bronze hardware, farmhouse sinks, and polished nickel or brass fixtures. The goal is to infuse both rooms with plenty character, something that marble does rather effortlessly in addition to warm paint hues, vintage dishware and timeless lighting details bring the look together while ensuring it never feels dated.
